

International Socialist Review

MARCH - APRIL 1970 50¢

First publication in English

LEON TROTSKY: Problems of Civil War

CBS/2/36

also Ernest Mandel:
Peaceful Coexistence and World Revolution

Coexiste

a new collection

By Any Means Necessary

Edited by George Breitman
Speeches, interviews and a letter, many of which have never appeared in print. Includes three speeches to rallies of the Organization of Afro-American Unity; radio and magazine interviews from the last year; and a letter written by Malcolm X to his supporters from Africa. A companion volume to Malcolm X Speaks.

Publication Date May 19, 1970
LC# 74-108718, SBN #87348-145-3,
192pp, cloth $5.95, paper $1.95

Malcolm X

from Malcolm X's last speeches:

All thinking people today who have been oppressed are revolutionary. Any time you find somebody today who's afraid of the word "revolution," get him on out of your way. He's living in the wrong era. He's behind the times. He hasn't awakened yet. This is the era of revolution. . . .

Anything you can think of that you want to change right now, the only way you can change it is with a ballot or a bullet. And if you're not ready to get involved with either one of those, you are satisfied with the status quo. That means we'll have to change you.

When you tell this black man in America who he is, where he came from, what he had when he was there, he'll look around and ask himself, "Well, what happened to it, who took it away from us and how did they do it?" Why, brothers, you'll have some action just like that. When you let the black man in America know his knowledge in itself will usher in your action program. And it will be necessary.

Pathfinder Press

873 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10003

085/2/36